The re- credited assertion that they are still at large, The translation of the Liturgy itself is as are so is pretty certain to end in plunging the ristration book is a farce. It neither reveals unpunished, in Tientein the names of all the head men, the true objects of association, nor all the places of meeting. The late disturbances have shown that meetings can be held in the heart of the jungle in the dead of night, to which the police cannot gain admission, -- in fact cannot with enfety show their faces The avil resulting from the law, is, that it makes the registration of the names of the headmen compulsory, for the purpose of getting hold of them more readily in case of disturbance Formerly the police were able to find out, by quiet inquiry and observation, who were the most influential men of a society; but since this law came in force, there is every reason to against revealing it. The police now know less of the succeties than before. There is still another phase of the question, We are informed of rather a comical develop- ment should have the legal power of suppreswill in force, the law will be likely to prove of the concurrence of the people; and the greater part of the population are members of the societies. Though the Government may have resources sufficient to enable it to overcome any one of the societies, or all them together, in any open raid, it has not means of enporessing any one of them. It cannot find out who are or are not members, and if it could it would. he difficult for it to punish them for continuing membership after the edict for dissolution had gone forth. We do not doubt that in time it may be possible to narrow these associations down to smaller limits, or to direct them into more legitimate associations; but not so long as our Chinese population remains a finating one, and the same ignorance as now of the beneficence of our laws prevails among the uneducated bulk of them. They, have been connected with similar societies in their own country, and believe the protection that after 3 p.m. he had no recollection of any description necessary to protect them from afforded by some strong organization of this raids of robbers, and injustice and oppression from the Europeans and natives. Having once parolled themselves, few have the moral sourage to withdraw, for fear of the enmity they would thereby be sure to incur. Many indeed, believe they would then be at the mercy of either or all the societies, and that they would have no chance of redress; and so they remain members, and help to continue the very state of things against which they seek to

It may at some future day be possible, when be Government is in a position to find out the tention to warnings as to the consequences, was leaders and the object of a society in spite of the secrecy it may observe, to suppress dangerous associations by punishing all who may dare to assume their control; but even then, it must be able and prepared to enforce what it undertakes, and not stop short of the accomplishment of its object. Till then, however; we think it would be wiser not to legislate at all than to legislate in vain. The Dangerous Societies Suppression Ordinance, as it is called, was, we believe, only passed for twelve months. Unless it can be improved and made of some practical use, it should be allowed to die out at the end of its term.

The Times of India is sorry to find that a ra ther ambiguous paragraph in the Madras Mail' about the 19th Madras Native Infantry, seems to be founded on very disagreeable fact. The Bangulore Herald asks: - "Is it true, for instance, that several of the men were placed under arrest for insolent language to the officer second in command and the Adjutant? Is it true that when on parade, the men refused to stir a step, nithough repentedly commanded to do so? And believe the men represented to be the leaders further, that on a voice from the ranks calling distinction between day and night; and if I from reading Mr. Carlyle's letter, to prove that of some of the societies that have been regis. out, Release the prisoners and we shall obey did not shine upon the earth, there would not the strong outhusiasm for Germany which beat released? We ask these questions, in the in terests both of the Army and the public, and is they are explained, no one will be better pleased than ourselves. But in the meantime the most ngly rumours are flying about,"

> > A CURIOUS STORY. A Viennese Jew, a convert to Protestantism. has lately died at Panesova, in Hungary, leafloring. This individual had been for many years the earthly providence of great and small Hungarian proprietors, lending them the means eyes of suppling their extravagance at a very high rate of interest. The father of four sons and four daughters, he did not trouble himself in the least about their education, and even refused them all means of subsistence later, remarking that as nature had provided them with arms and lege, they had but to make use of them to do very well. These paternal sentiments in duced the heirs of the usurer to have reconrac to gentle violence. One fine morning as he was returning from an expedition on business, he was suddenly attacked by his children, who bound him, and speedily robbed him of 100,000 floring which he carried about him. Furious at this occurrence, he separated himself entirely from his family, divorced his wife, who was in the plot, and-went to live at Vienna, where he abjured Judaism and became a Protestant. Since that time he lived very parsimoniously, and left off his former somewhat expensive babits. He has left 9,000 floring to the churches at Peath, constituting his grandchildren residuary legatees.—Pall Mall Gasette:

o Pontarlier, says :— Heaps of forsaken corpses mouldered away mong the bushes and in the ditches by the igh road. Nor far from Montbeliard a doctor and I found eight Frenchmen dead in one house, and already in an advanced stage of decomposition. Among them lay a wounded man still alive, and who oried for help in a lamentable voice. We took him out with some difficulty and laid him in the open air. He was a little man scarcely eventeen years of age, a student at Avignon:  Prussian grenade had torn his two legs below the knees. He had remained in this state seven whole days without being attended to, without water, and entangled among all those corpses. He had wrapped up his wounds to his companions, and had taken bits of biscuit out of their pockets, which sufficed for his subsistance; he had slaked his burning thirst by drinking the great flakes of snow which fell at the window. He had lived thus for a week. The unha py man has been taken to Switzerland, and the doctor thinks be will live. Horseflesh is now the principal food of the country; and I have myself seen a bevy o fumished women throw themselves upon a dead horse like a pack of wolves, and, tearing it with all sorts of instruments, swallow morsels quite raw.
